Students will receive a grade for each lesson. If lessons are missed, it would be appropriate for the student to contact the instructor. Lessons missed will not be made up. When the instructor is not able to attend a lesson, the student will be notified beforehand and the student will be asked to come to the music department and practice in one of the practice rooms during usual lesson time.
The music major is required to attend a certain number of musical performances approved by the instructor for recital attendance credit which is part of the music degree requirement. The non-major does not have this requirement but is encouraged to attend as many musical performances as possible.

At the end of the semester, the student will perform a minimum of three pieces before the music faculty. This performance will be graded by the music faculty and will count as the final examination or jury grade for the course. The final grade in the course will be the average of three categories: average weekly lesson grades, recital grade, and the jury grade.
